FROM THE PASTOR: Rev. Larry Hoffmann

Dear Friends,

Our vocation as a congregation is to proclaim the Good News of Jesus Christ to all people. George Hunter's book, The Celtic Way of Evangelism. Hunter speaks of two "ways" of evangelism. The traditional, western "way" is rooted in Augustine's conversion story. Augustine "looked into his own heart and found there the inexpressible anguish of each individual, which enabled him to articulate a theory of sin that has no equal..." In this "way," people face their sin, experience the grace of Christ, then become involved in the life of the church.

In Patrick's conversion experience was somewhat different. Patrick "prayed, made peace with God, and then looked not only into his own heart, but into the hearts of others. What he saw convinced him of the bright side – that even slave traders can turn into liberators, even murderers can act as peacemakers, even barbarians can take their place among the nobility of heaven." In this "way," Hunter suggests relationships are fundamental in proclaiming the Good News: positive, accepting relationships that invite people to participate in the life of the church and learn of Christ from our worship, prayers, ministry, and congregational life. In this relationship, people experience the grace of God and discover the gift of faith.

As we prepare to celebrate the movement of the Spirit in our lives through the season of Lent, may we be warm and accepting to all who enter here, in the same manner that Christ himself welcomed the many people he met each day.

Grace and peace to you,

Larry
